Directory Questionnaire 177

INTRODUCTION

This publication is a Directory of facilities purportedly serving hearing impaired persons who are developmentally disabled. This population includes children and adults of all ages who have not only hearing loss but also one or more of the conditions of autism, cerebral palsy, epilepsy, mental retardation, and other mental retardation-like disabilities. These latter conditions constitute the developmental disabilities as currently defined by Public Law 94–103, otherwise known as the Disabled Assistance and Bill of Rights Act.

The entries in this Directory were compiled from the results of a survey of more than 745 residential facilities and schools throughout the United States. Included were schools for the deaf, residential and day facilities for the developmentally disabled, special classes in public schools and rehabilitation centers. The survey cover letter and questionnaire are reproduced in Appendix 1.

The Model Demonstration Program for Hearing Impaired Developmentally Disabled Persons is a three-year project operating out of the Rehabilitation Center, College of Education, the University of Arizona, Tucson. Funding is provided by the Bureau of Developmental Disabilities, Office of Human Development, U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare. The Bureau has classified the project as one of national significance due to the widespread need for improved services to the hearing impaired among the nation's developmentally disabled. This population, heretofore relatively obscure, now has been defined and estimated to number close to one million (Stewart, 1978).

The basic goal of the Model Demonstration Program is to conduct service, research, and training activities that lead to significant advances in the state of the art in serving hearing impaired developmentally disabled persons. The production of informational, diagnostic, instructional, and professional training media, models, and related products has emerged as a central activity of the Model Demonstration Program.

Early in the development of the Model Demonstration Program efforts were made to identify those service systems, instructional media, and service programs that were believed to be exemplary models for replication in a variety of settings. This effort has been successful in several areas. However, a consistent finding over the first two years of the project was that there was no nationally recognized service program for the hearing impaired developmentally disabled. In fact, little seemed to be known about where specialized services for this population could be found.

Brannan, Sigelman, and Bensberg (1975), in their survey of state institutions for the retarded, queried 212 state facilities to ask about their services for the hearing impaired. Of the responding institutions, 158 returned usable program data. The survey authors report:

> . . . slightly over half (52%) of the institutions did not have a distinct program for any hearing impaired group. Of the 76 which clearly felt that they had one or more distinct programs, the majority (59%) had a single program serving both the deaf and hard of hearing . . . we can conclude that most public institutions did not perceive themselves as offering distinct programs for the hearing impaired. Those which do provide distinct programs generally work with the deaf and hard of hearing as a single, hearing impaired group.
> (From Brannan, et al. The hearing impaired mentally retarded: a survey of state institutions for the retarded. Lubbock: Texas Tech University, 1975, pp. 27–28.)

Today, in 1978, it is difficult to determine whether institutions and schools are actually providing appropriate, needed services to the hearing impaired developmentally disabled. However, this Directory lists those facilities and schools that perceive themselves as offering specialized services to this population. Hopefully, their perceptions are accurate, and this Directory will serve as a helpful resource to agency administrators, service workers, teachers, and parents who are seeking resources for hearing impaired developmentally disabled persons.

Grateful appreciation is extended to the many agency and school personnel who took time from their busy, demanding schedules to complete the survey questionnaire upon which this Directory is based. The support of the Bureau of Developmental Disabilities, Office of Human Development, and especially the guidance of Ms. Thelma Lucas, are gratefully acknowledged. Finally, Ms. Debi Richardson, administrative aide to the author, assisted extensively in the preparation of all Directory entries. Her help is here acknowledged and appreciated.

HOW TO USE THIS DIRECTORY

This directory is organized according to state-by-state entries. Beginning with Arizona and ending with Wyoming, the facilities and programs within each state are listed and described.

By turning to the pages pertaining to a given state, the reader may ascertain the names and addresses of facilities purporting to offer specialized services to hearing impaired developmentally disabled persons in that state. The names of contact persons are given, and program details are described in summary form.

A caveat is in order. While the programs are listed and described in rather extensive detail, the reader should bear in mind that descriptions are based upon information that may or may not be accurate. In no way should the Directory be seen as indicating approval (or disapproval) of a given program. Likewise, the fact that a program does not appear in this Directory has no negative implication for the program. Absence of an entry means only that the program either did not receive a questionnaire or did not return the questionnaire it did receive.

Dear Agency Director:

The Model Demonstration Program for the Hearing Impaired Developmentally Disabled, a three-year Developmental Disabilities Office-funded project of national significance, is developing a Directory of Services for the Hearing Impaired Developmentally Disabled. This Directory will be disseminated nationally to selected schools, agencies, and professional groups.

We believe your organization may wish to be listed in the Directory. If you do indeed desire this listing, please complete the enclosed questionnaire and return it to us no later than August 21, 1978.

Thank you for your assistance. If your organization is listed in our directory, you will automatically receive a copy upon its completion in October, 1978.

Sincerely,

Larry D. Stewart
